Originally I'm from Vitoria-Gasteiz, a city in the north of Spain. For a number of years I worked as a multi-lingual customer representative for a European airline. I started having symptoms, but they were similar to endometriosis which I'd had for as long as I could remember. A few months later it started to get way way worse, with bouts of pain and everything. It was obvious to me that it was a big tumour, because you could feel it on my pelvis. I wasn't told it was cancer until the results came back, which was 15 days after the operation.

After a few weeks at home, I realised I had to get out. I couldn't stand on my feet, and needed help to go up and down the stairs to my flat. I think I was in a very bad spot, psychologically. At the beginning you're in denial, you can't believe it. I found myself trapped in my mum's story – she passed of ovarian cancer four years and a half before my diagnosis, so the only thing I could think was 'it's going to happen to me'.

One day, I had to go to hospital for a S

Centres

We had 20 centres open in 2018 across the UK, and by 2022 we want 30 centres to be open. This means we can be there for 50% of the cancer population in the UK.

First time visits

00 000

In 2018, 67,000 people visited a centre for the first time. By 2022 we want to welcome 100,000 people with cancer and their families.

Awareness

28 → 50

Our external awareness in 2018 was at 28%, which we want to increase to 50% by 2022.

Total visits

00 000

Our total visits in 2018 were 281,000, and we want to grow that to 400,000 in 2022.

Revenue income

17.8 → 22
m

We raised £17.8m in revenue income in 2018. By 2022 we hope to raise £22m to support our centre visitors.

"It was just four months before I was due to marry my amazing husband, Robin, that I was diagnosed with cancer for the first time. I had a routine x-ray after feeling a bit under the weather with horrible pains in my left shoulder and my chest, and the news wasn't good. I had stage four incurable breast cancer which had spread throughout my neck.

Maggie's Leeds, which opens this summer, means I'll finally have a centre close to me. Knowing that me and my family will have Maggie's to go to for help and support is a massive comfort. I feel so reassured that there will be a lot of help for them as my illness progresses.

The expertise at Maggie's is so valuable, and I know from spending time at other centres that the programme of events and activities is a lifeline to so many people with cancer."
